Technology and innovation in language learning and teaching

LLAS’s successful annual symposium on the use of technology in HE language education is a 2-day event of practical presentations, workshops and inspiring ideas to fuel the imagination.

By bridging the gap between the ‘techie’ and the teacher, the symposium gives educators ideas to help them integrate elearning into their practice but also to inspire them to see where the online future could lead.

The symposium is always well-attended by university practitioners from a wide range of disciplines and institutions. Over 80 delegates came to Southampton last year and we are hoping to welcome even more this year!

This year we will be using a conference app that will give sponsors greater exposure before, during and after the event.
